Creating new pages

In general, only administrators can create new pages.

The exception is for pages whose location is programmatically determined, for example, a News item.

Please see the Removing old pages PDF for more information on deleting and unpublishing pages.

Page templates

Blog post
Use this content type for creating new blog posts

College - graduate
Used for college pages in the Graduate admissions section

College - undergraduate
Used for college pages in the Undergraduate admissions section

Contact
Used for person, role or department details for OxWeb events

Course - graduate
Used to create graduate course pages

Course - undergraduate
Used to create undergraduate course pages

Event - graduate
This is similar to the "Event" content type but is only used within the Graduate section of the site.

Event
Used for University of Oxford events

News item
Used for both OxWeb and Oxford Today general news items

Oxweb homepage
A bespoke content type to choose the carousel and discovery items for the OxWeb homepage.

Oxweb homepage highlights
Secondary content type to be used as teasers (carousel and discovery) items on the OxWeb homepage

Oxweb News Index
Pulls in references for the news (and events) index page on Oxweb

Page - tabbed
This is similar to the "Page" content type (below), and additional allows for tabbed content to be included.

Page
Page is the most general content type. Used for all content that doesn't have a specialist content type on both OxWeb.

Research case study
Use this content type to create a research case study, which will be filterable by theme and funder.

Section highlight
Use this secondary content type for creating the highlight blocks (image, title, text and link) that are used on section indexes. Note that section highlights have their own workflow, so need publishing in addition to the section index.

Section highlight alt
Use this content type for creating new section highlights for use on Section Index pages. Works in a similar way to the section highlight but doesn't require an image and you can create links within the text.

Section index
Use this content type for creating section index pages – these pages typically have a banner image/carousel, rows of three section highlights and/or a two-column video highlight.

Subsite
Use this content type to create stand-alone rich content subsites with custom colour schemes.

Video highlight
Secondary content type to be used as video embed on Section Index pages

Video wall
The video wall gives you the ability to display videos from playlists uploaded to Youtube in order to build tabbed video walls.

Webform
Create a new form or questionnaire accessible to users. Submission results and statistics are recorded and accessible to privileged users. Note: this content type is outside workflow.
